Kilmarnock is the predominant market town within East Ayrshire and benefits from a comprehensive range of local amenities, including excellent primary and secondary schooling, restaurants and bars, road and rail links to Glasgow and beyond, retail shopping, supermarkets and a host of varied leisure facilities. There are a number of music venues, exhibition halls, such as the Dick Institute, and a number of spacious public green spaces, including the Kay Park, Howard Park and the park surrounding the historic Dean Castle. Clay Crescent is ideally positioned to take advantage of all of the neighbouring amenities and also for swift commuting to surrounding districts via the recently upgraded A77/M77 road network, which also links to both Prestwick International Airport and Glasgow Airport.
